What Alternatives Can Religion Present to the Will of Modern Man? by PROFESSOR W. N. WRIGHT, of the University of Manitoba, Winnipeg, Canada.

Revivalism as a Phase of Frontier Life, by PROFESSOR PETER G. MODE, University of Chicago.

It is very gratifying to see the good will which has greeted the Journal of Religion in its new endeavor. The number of subscribers gives evidence of a significant body of men and women in this country who believe that religion is worthy of the most careful scholarship, and who expect that such a scholarly study of religion will enhance its prestige and usefulness. This widespread interest is shown not only in the subscription list, but in the constant stream of contributions voluntarily sent to the editor.

Can the results of scholarship be made interesting? Upon the answer to this question depends the future of religion. Pictorial and dramatic interpretations of religion are always interesting. Superstitions never fail to attract numerous minds. Does religion continue to be interesting when the facts are carefully scrutinized? Here is the crucial test which scholars must meet. The Journal of Religion is established to discuss religion as a vital human interest.

From two teachers of theology have come interesting comments. One expresses gratification at the "human, yet scholarly" emphasis which he discerns in the pages of the Journal. The other expresses his warm approval of certain articles which are constructive in their aim as well as critical in their method. Surely nothing could be more desirable than to aid in making religion both human and constructive. If the Journal of Religion can further this end it will have justified its existence.

Opportunities for Wise, Profitable Investment

FAR-SIGHTED persons who desire to help in bringing about a better world will pay attention to causes as well as to conditions. Things never will be right until people are right. People will not be right until they are right in ideals, purposes and will. Supremely our society needs religious motives.

Of the forty-two million young people in the United States not over fifteen millions are receiving any systematic religious instruction. Does not this help to explain certain menacing conditions?

Who will help to remedy this appalling condition?

The Religious Education Association calls on all good men to help.

THE ASSOCIATION SEEKS YOUR CO-OPERATION in sustaining its general work, by annual membership costing $4.00, and bringing its magazine to you.

THE ASSOCIATION OFFERS YOU OPPORTUNITIES for far-reaching service in meeting certain special needs:

$1,000 annually for the Library-Exhibit, to organize the large and rich material already gathered and to make it more useful to all institutions and workers.

$2,500 annually for the free distribution of pamphlets and other materials on methods, and booklets helpful to parents, ministers, teachers, etc. The best writers and experts are voluntarily furnishing us this material. They give their time and brains; will you give of your means to get this material to the people?

We gave away 180,000 pamphlets last year.
Who will make this work permanent?

$5,000 annually for five years for research, for thorough investigation into the fundamental problems of the religious education of American children.

Distinctive Features of the Review

1. Comprehensive surveys of recent literature rather than reviews of individual books.
2. A new department of Notes that affords scholars an opportunity for suggestion and comment.
3. Surveys, by eminently qualified scholars, of theological literature published in Germany, Switzerland, Holland, and as far as possible in the Scandinavian countries, since 1914.
4. Surveys in other fields, such as the History of Religions, and of publications in English and other languages.

The subscription price remains at $2.00

CONSTRUCTIVE STUDIES BEST BECAUSE

1. They make large use of the Bible. We place this feature first as there are many engaged in the task of religious education who feel that the Bible should be used sparingly and that lessons should be drawn from modern life.

We use the Bible in such a way as to bring out those fundamental traits of character which have been shown in every century, and in every land—courage, loyalty, good cheer, friendliness, generosity, self-sacrifice. We believe that we gain by using a distinctively religious literature for this purpose. But we do not use the Bible as an end in itself without regard to the needs of the pupil for character training.

2. In the lower grades we do not neglect the use of nature materials. Many lessons in the primary and kindergarten grades are introduced by nature talks. The seasons are observed, and not infrequently nature stories are used. In these grades our books adequately guide the teacher, not in the story period alone, but throughout the hour, giving a complete program for each period, in which the story is a single unit in a complete and artistic whole, including prayers, songs, responses, texts, and every detail of the day's work.

3. Our junior work presents Jesus Christ and his great forerunners and successors as heroes for all time.

4. Our senior work emphasizes religious attitudes and problems of life.

5. Our adult work in this and related series is varied sufficiently to suit all tastes and needs, including biblical, psychological, historical, social, and missionary.

6. Notebooks and handwork materials in such grades as can appropriately use them are of the highest quality, and are always an integral part of the pedagogic whole, never tacked on, or merely for entertainment. They impress something useful and help the pupil to create something beautiful.

7. Last and most important. Our series is not closed. Each year new contributions are made, and there are far-reaching plans for continuous improvement. We are keeping pace with the advance in this field through our able editors and through educational experts whose wisdom is commandeered for this task.

Use the Constructive Studies, for they are as a whole the best, and because of their permanent form in the long run they are the cheapest.

Keep on using the Constructive Studies, for they will continually improve in quality. We are keeping cost in mind in all our new courses, and hope that the price of material and labor will soon make it possible for us to announce reductions. Notice that we already carry cloth and paper editions of several volumes.
